

CPP and Ethics

There are very few open access articles and papers on cultural property protection and ethics, and the research literature on this is relatively limited. These papers provide some of the academic background to our work (see our page on our Ethics and Principles), which we constantly looking to develop.

Inclusion does not indicate endorsement by the Blue Shield of the views and opinions in them.

Several members of the Blue Shield International are in the Core Research Group for the Heritage in War Project, an AHRC-funded project combining aesthetics, value theory and the ethics of war.

Blue Shield have also contributed to this open access CPP module for the Centre for Military Ethics (requires registration, but no cost).

Our ethical framework is supported by international humanitarian law, and international human rights law. You can read more about these in our Law Library (with links to further resources).
